

Editors' Choice 2001

Our panel of experts, Steve Caudill, Rocky Oliver, Henry Newberry, Brian Benz, Greg Pepus, and Jamie Magee, searched the Lotusphere 2001 trade show floor for innovative developmental products. We hope the following information serves as a guide for you in your development efforts. Some products will be familiar to you from previous years, but please take note of the newcomers as well. To be considered, products had to have been in full release at the time of judging.

The SecurTrac product by System addresses a problem that must be dealt with: tracking changes to critical pieces of data in Notes applications as they move through the workflow process. Prior to SecurTrac, the only option was for the programmer to write complex routines to track these changes which added to the overhead of the application significantly. SecurTrac provides an easy-to-configure, minimal impact-to-performance system that reports on changes to any or all data elements in documents in databases. Because it uses a server-based plug in that captures the information during the write process, SecurTrac can monitor distributed applications effectively at the central point.

Anyone with auditing requirements in their applications or with interest in securing the flow of information due to regulatory requirements would be well served to evaluate and deploy SecurTrac.
